DISCOVER CIVIL AIR PATROL

Aviation • Service • Leadership • Community

Civil Air Patrol (CAP) is the official civilian auxiliary of the U.S. Air Force—a volunteer organization where people of all ages serve their communities, develop aviation skills, and support missions that matter. Join us for an introduction to CAP, including a brief look at its nationally recognized Cadet Program and the many ways adults can become involved as Senior Members.

A special focus for pilots and aviation-minded volunteers

Learn how you can become a qualified CAP pilot and build experience while supporting real-world missions. Opportunities may include CAP-funded or government-supported flying, aerial reconnaissance and disaster imagery, search-and-rescue support, radio-relay missions, fire-watch and other airborne observation missions, drug-interdiction support when tasked, orientation flights for youth, and much more. CAP also relies on observers, mission-scanner personnel, communications specialists, ground-team members, aerospace educators, and administrative volunteers—so there is something for everyone.
